

●●● This family wanted a casual retreat reminiscent of their favorite vacation spot, Aspen. To lend added warmth to the custom-built fireplace we wrapped the beams with reclaimed wood from an 1880s barn in Maine. Two large copper pendants anchor the inviting conversational seating. ● This sweet tropical nursery was completed with a custom hand-carved rocking horse.

Beth Krupa Interiors

Our accessible design team works collaboratively as designers with our clients to achieve the best possible results. We have created a warm and inviting environment where the client doesn't have to feel intimidated by the process. Our clientele values Beth's generous nature and her welcoming response when they drop by the studio to say hello.

Our specialty is the ability to use Beth's degree in sociology, combined with her study in interior design, to really listen to her clients and get to the heart of what they are trying to achieve. Together we explore the full spectrum of design solutions and possibilities. We appreciate the couple who want their home "done well" but feels stuck or don't know where to begin. That's really our strong suit. Our clients tend to have very active lifestyles and value how quickly we can pull together a room created specifically for their young, energetic families. We think in terms of present needs, but also try to forecast future wants that they can grow into.

Since our clients value their home for entertaining family and friends, we want the environments to say "welcome!" and for their guests to leave with a true sense of who they are as a family, to know more about their travels and pursuits, or to just feel a stronger bond with them.
